Press Release- Oodles of snow arrives on cue in France & 12 killer deals in France to book last-minute

After a largely warm and dry few weeks, temperature and plummeted and up to 120 centimetres of white fluff has been deposited on the mountains across France over the weekend. The splendid news is that tomorrow (Wednesday 25th November) the weatherman will be playing an encore and sending another whopping consignment of joy. Clearly this is marvellous for skiers, snowboarders and other miscellaneous mountain enthusiasts, and bodes well for the start of the ski season, which is already upon us in France.

Last December wasn't the best in recent memory, which means fantastic early-season deals are available this time around. And with sterling early snow conditions that means great skiing at hugely appealing prices. And another excuse to put your mind (and money) toward more exciting pursuits than slaloming down Oxford Street in search of stocking-fillers.
